Bob Jones boosted his salary 300%*. Could you do the same?

A few years ago, he was just another guy. Putting in long hours in a monotonous job. Barely able to make ends meet. No prestige. And no opportunity to get ahead.

But Bob Jones had determination. He looked around and saw other men being promoted. Men with no more on the ball than he had. Except for one thing. Specialized training that made them worth more to their employers.

So then and there Bob made up his mind to get out of the rut he was in. He read an ad for International Correspondence Schools, and mailed the coupon. (The same coupon you see at the bottom of this page.) And though he didn't know it, he'd already taken his first step up.

Soon, Bob was busy studying in his spare time. Learning new skills, and applying them in his work. It wasn't long before he was offered a better job, with a fat increase in pay. Then came other promotions—and each time, more money. Bob Jones was starting to go places. The future was bright. Today, his salary has skyrocketed 300%!

Bob Jones' success story isn't unique. It simply proves what determination can do. You can do it, too, if you're even half as interested in making good. Pick the position you want, and I.C.S. will help you prepare for it. Just as it helped Bob Jones, and hundreds of thousands of others.

Clip this coupon now. Mail it at once. You'll receive 3 valuable booklets—free. They'll prove to you that Bob Jones' success story can be yours!

*The true story of Robert B. Jones, Houston, Texas. From the success files of I.C.S.

More than 7,000,000 men and women have already enrolled with I.C.S.

Las Vegas: Police (above) put $13,500 worth of illegal drugs into pile for bonfire in desert. Newsmen and cops stayed away from fumes. Right: Chicago cops and detective on alert for snipers. Residents of housing project opened fire when police came to answer call of local store holdup. Robber was slain.

Your Dreams Can Become a Reality with your own Duraclean Franchise

Hundreds of men—previously working for salaries or wages—now enjoy greatly increased incomes, personal independence, and secure futures as owners of their own businesses under the Duraclean Franchise

Unthinking men may tell you that the day is past when an individual can build a successful business of his own. The fact is that Franchising has opened a wonderful new world of opportunity for such men. The "mama and papa" grocery store, and the corner druggist have succumbed to the gigantic chains. But, in their place an exciting new kind of business abounds with big profit opportunities for the individual.

For twenty years the "service industry" has been growing with fantastic speed. Let the chains have the retail store business. Even a small business providing an unusual service can bring profits to the individual that were unheard of in the old days. And, unlike the chains, the service business today, is thriving under Franchising.

What is the difference? Just this: A chain is a large number of stores in a chain all operating under the same plan; under the same well-known name; but are owned by one corporation. In Franchising, the individual uses tested and proven plans for starting his business and building it; he operates under a Nationally Advertised and well-known name, he has step by step guidance but he owns the business. He enjoys the advantages of chain recognition, but he keeps all the net profits for himself.

The Duraclean Franchise is such a business. No store to rent. No fixtures to buy. No inventory or stock of goods to pay for. No office or work-room required. And, no special education or experience is needed for success. Men of almost every educational level have made glowing successes with the "know-how" furnished by our Company. They've worked from their homes as all Duraclean Service is given on the premises of the customers. In the beginning they've used the family car as all equipment can be carried in the trunk. Their only investment has been a cash outlay of less than a $1000.

What is Duraclean Service. It is a modern method of cleaning and reviving color and resilience of carpets, rugs, upholstered furniture and auto interiors—a method that has almost unbelievable superiority over the old way of harsh scrubbing with water, strong detergents, and power driven brushes. Tests made by an independent laboratory show that the Duraclean "Absorption Method" removes twice as much dirt and soil removed by machine scrubbing. And, the carpets and upholstery are dry and ready to use a few hours after cleaning. In addition to cleaning and reviving, you have five other equally superior services to increase profits. The improved Duraclean process has proved so superior that Duraclean Services are now available through a world wide organization.

Who are the customers? The finest homes in your community, yes. But, of equal importance hotels, motels, schools, shops, stores, offices, theaters, hospitals, and institutions. The commercial business is big and because much of this work can be done evenings or Saturdays, many men have started in spare time without giving up their jobs or pay checks. When they have seen from actual experience that Duraclean could pay them many times their former salaries, they have resigned the old job and become independent businessmen—with all the added respect and standing that a businessman has in his community.

If you've ever had a really strong desire to "some day own your own business" the Duraclean Franchise is well worth investigating. We have no salesmen to try to influence you. The entire Duraclean Opportunity is explained in detail in a 24-page book. This book will be mailed free to any man sincerely interested in a future of security and independence. Just your name and address is all that's needed. Send it today. After reading all the facts, if you decide to take the next step, you can write again and let us know.

We'll help you with financing, with training, with equipment, and with all our years of experience in showing other men how to make their dreams become realities. To investigate costs nothing and does not place you under the slightest obligation. Is this something you should do for yourself? Today?

ONE NIGHT OF HELL HOUSE OF NAKED

by JOHN CUNNINGHAM

"HELLO, DOC. Thanks for calling. How is she?" Detective Kindel asked, as he put a leather case on a chair in the hospital office.

"Well, Sergeant, she's made a hell of a lot of improvement since your people brought her in here day before yesterday. We've brought her out of a state of hysterical shock and now the problem is to treat her for multiple burns, abrasions and bruises on almost every part of her body. Did you see her?"

"No, the ambulance crew picked her up, and we had nothing to go on until we found out who she was. She didn't fit any of our Missing Persons reports."

"Yes, well that's why I called, Sergeant. This morning she told a nurse that her name was Sonya Markley. I had issued orders to let me know as soon as she talked, but not to encourage her to say anything until you got over here."

"Yeah, thanks, Doc. What does she look like?"

"When you first see her you notice that she is extremely overweight, probably over 200 pounds. She's about five something tall, I'd guess about 36 years old and has fairly nice features. I'd also guess that she is fairly intelligent, although we haven't had any conversation. But that woman sure fell into the hands of some sadistic bastards!"

"What about the medical report, Doc?"

"As you know, she came in here as an unknown emergency. They called me to the receiving room after a preliminary examination, and I've never seen anything like it. The woman was in severe shock and we had to get on that immediately. In a more thorough examination later we tested for internal injuries but found nothing serious. Her body is a mass of welts, burns and bruises and there was evidence of multiple rape. We took X-Rays yesterday and there don't seem to be any broken bones. I would say that her general health was good."

"What do you think caused the injuries, Doc?"

"It could be almost anything, belts, sticks or bare hands. The burns were probably caused by cigarettes or matches."

IN THE PAIN!

Torture—rape—horror—and that was only half of the hell that the gang of drunken sadists inflicted on the flesh of their kidnapped victim!

I thought I was going to a party,
but before the night was finished
I found out the party was on me.

Have you found out anything, Sergeant?"

"Not really, Doc. We checked out the guy who picked her up early that morning out on the old Quarry Road. He was clean, a fellow on his way to work. He saw this woman staggering along the roadside, stark naked and dazed. He stopped, said she was muttering incoherently and would scream every few minutes. I'll give the guy credit, he didn't panic, got her into his car and phoned us from a gas station about two miles from where he picked her up."

"I'll be damned! You know, Sergeant, if I were a detective I'd guess this woman had been mauled and raped by a number of men. If figures, she's big and husky enough to fight off one man before all that damage could be inflicted."

"You're probably right, Doc. But right now we need some answers on who, where and how. Could I see her now?"

"Yes, I'll take you to her room. What's in the case, Sergeant?"

"A tape recorder. I thought maybe I could get her to talk more freely and with less embarrassment if I came alone."

"Yes, well, that's considerate. Come on, Sergeant. I'll take you to her room and I hope you can get a lead on what happened. Will you let me know?"

"Yeah, Doc, I'll let you know." As they reached the closed door of the woman's room, the doctor spoke with habitual professionalism when he cautioned: "Now, don't take too long and wear her out, Sergeant." Then he opened the door and both men walked in quietly. The woman turned her head toward them and said nothing, but a note of question was written on her face when she saw the Sergeant and his leather case. The doctor greeted her pleasantly:

"Well, good afternoon, And I guess we can call you Sonya now, is that right?"

The woman nodded and the doctor went on to introduce Sergeant Kindel, as from the County Police detective bureau, and explained that he wanted to talk with her for awhile. The woman nodded understanding and Sergeant Kindel smiled reassuringly. The doctor left the room, closing the door softly and the detective knew instinctively that his first task would be to put the woman at ease and in a mood to talk.

■ SONYA. HE began, "may I call you that?"

She nodded assent and he pulled a chair to her bedside. Speaking slow and softly, Detective Kindel continued:

"Sonya, I'm here to help you

FOR AN EASY CURE!

Male sex failure is sometimes the result of a medical disorder. But the latest scientific research has uncovered a far more common cause, one that can be easily cured.

BY ANDREW McPARTLAND, MD

IF ANYONE WHO KNEW them could tell you, the C-s were an ideal couple, still passionately in love after four years of marriage. Harry was a strapping six-footer, the picture of health, and May was as pretty and full-bodied a girl as ever decided to marry instead of going into modelling. Only one thing darkened the C-s' lives, though they had been trying desperately to have another baby, their three-and-a-half-year-old Harry, Jr., seemed destined to remain an only child.

"I can't understand it," May said to the doctor in despair. "I've never been able to have any children."

That would have been something, else. But little Harry was conceived on his honeymoon. What's changed? "What's different?"

The answer was nothing, apparently. Tests and an intensive physical examination demonstrated that May's capacity to become pregnant and bear babies was absolutely normal. As for Harry, though every microscopic count showed him to be in the lower ranges of fertility, the count was still high enough to achieve conception under ordinary circumstances—especially in view of the couple's two-year history of marriage.

Usual brand of Nazi "friendly persuasion" for prisoners reluctant to turn traitor. This man was later hanged.

CANARIS THE NAZI SPY WHO MURDERED FOR FUN

by ATWOOD I. MATINBURY

IT WAS, I believe, in 1938 that I met Canaris personally. I was only 12 at the time. My parents were visiting Germany where a cousin, a member of the consular staff, had occasion to meet with the Admiral. I don't remember too much about him. He was small. I do recall that. And he had the coldest blue eyes of any human being I ever met, before or since. I was told, later that day after he had left, the Wilhelm Canaris was Germany's greatest spy, the head of the Abwehr (Secret Service) and an important man in the German high command.

■ was ten years later before I returned to Germany again. This time it was as ■ very junior officer in the army of occupation. I heard nothing of Canaris then. No one seemed to know what had happened to him.

In the 1950's finished with army service, by some accident or other, I happened to mention to a friend of mine the small incident about Canaris.

"You interested in that sort of thing?" he asked. "Just happened to see some notes on the man. He's dead, you know!"

"How?" I asked. "The war? Or war crimes trials?"

"No. . . Hitler killed him. Had him hanged. The old secret agent was mixed up in the bomb plot. But read the papers for yourself. I'll send them to you, tomorrow."

I read those brief notes. My interest was really involved. And so, for the past several years, I made it my business to find out all I could about Canaris. I've talked to his associates. . . those who survived, that is. . . and to quite a few who worked under him in the Abwehr. It was a long, hard job piecing things together. Because Wilhelm Canaris was one of the strangest, most secretive persons who ever lived.

If ever a man was devoted to cold-blooded efficiency, it was Canaris. No method was above him; nothing was below him. He used any and every method of intelligence that had ever been invented. And it was all so much a part of his life that no one could tell where his job ended and his personal life began.

Take his relationships with women, for example. During his tenure as chief of the Abwehr, he was involved with more than a hundred of them. And yet, who can say whether or not he was satisfying his needs or just using them as tools of his trade. For it's a fact that almost every one of them in the end gave him information he wanted.

Quite ■ few he betrayed.

One who survived was Anna M——. "I met Canaris at a party in Berlin in November 1942," she told me. "I was attracted to him immediately. There was something so unbending about him, so strong, so purposeful about him that it was as if he were a challenge to my womanhood. I determined to (Continued on page 44)

NEW CLUES TO THE LOST TREASURE OF BAGDAD

by STARK HAYMER

EVERY DAME I ever met had one thing in common. They were all just nuts about money. And this one wasn't any different. Can't say I blame her very much. I get a bit loving myself at the sight of the long green. But still....

Now this gal was something to look at. A body? But yes. Definitely yes. She must have been wearing the happiest brassiere east of Suez and that takes in a lot of territory. The rest of her matched perfectly. I can give you that information from personal observation.

She wasn't the least bit bashful. Quite the contrary. Given a choice she was one woman who preferred to be out of her clothes rather than in them. Why the first time I walked into her apartment there she was, naked as a jaybird.

Actually I'd dropped in completely uninvited. Still, she never batted an eyelid. She didn't have to. One look at her and I stopped dead in my tracks. I stared. I admit it. I might have been a twelve year old at his first visit to a Burleycue the way my eyes popped. But where do you see flesh like hers these days.

Now Bagdad in the middle of summer is hot. No sane man would spend his time there, at least not if he could help it. It's not only uncomfortable, but unemployed

We carried supplies and the goods to small mountain villages. We knew somebody was after us and it made sense to take the long way.

Americans are not exactly loved.

But what could I do? I WAS unemployed. And even worse, I was flat broke. I could have contacted the American Consul, of course, but that was a last resort. Something told me that while the consul might be glad to see me, I wouldn't be exactly happy to see him. There might have been some minor misunderstanding about a purported case of smuggling. Naturally I wasn't involved. Still, there was no sense in asking for trouble. So when this character asked me to keep an eye on his wife—he had an idea she was playing some extra-curricular games—I took the assignment. Especially since he was going to pay me for the job.

Slipping into her apartment was child's play. And that's when I first ran into her. Right at that moment I forgot about my assignment. Hell, for a girl like that I could forget about almost anything.

"Hi," she said.

"Hi," I said right back. And we continued to stare at each other. I think I was getting the best of that bargain.

"Well stupid," she finally managed to murmur, "don't just stand there. Come over here and sit down. I suppose Eric sent you."

"Eric?" I looked blank.

"My husband, silly. I can't think of any other reason you might be dropping in, unless you're a thief. An there isn't anything here worth stealing, as you can see." She waved her arm in a circle around the room.

"Unless of course you want to steal me."

The idea was definitely appealing. I grinned.

"Look lady," I started to explain, "it's nothing like that at all. Your husband hired me to..."

"To catch me with my lover. That's it, isn't it," she broke in. "The fool. The utter damn fool. Believe me, if I wanted another man, I'd hardly have to go to this much trouble. I detest fools. So you can go right back to him and tell him that there's nothing to report. That's the truth, so far .... that is, unless you'd like to stay here a while and amuse me." She laughed, a low, soft, tinkly kind of laugh.

"Look lady," I began again.

"No you look. I'm sure you can get more out of it than I can, unless you'd care to take off a few clothes. Then I'll be glad to look. Anyway I'm no lady and my name is Karen, if you're interested."

OK then. What would you have done? So I stayed. It was the beginning of a very interesting friendship.

It was easy too. And profitable. I had every reason in the world to keep close to her. I was supposed to be spying on her, wasn't I. Her husband was paying me well for the job. The situation couldn't have been better.

But nothing lasts for ever. I guess old Eric wasn't as dumb as I thought he was. Because about a month later we got caught. Seems the SOB hadn't trusted me as completely as I'd thought. He had the gall to hire a second spy to keep an eye on me. For all I knew he might even have had a third one watching the second.

He burst in on us at the most inconvenient moment, ranting like a maniac and waving a pistol.

Maybe he wasn't as dumb as I thought, but he wasn't very smart, either. In my league you use a pistol for shooting, not for waving. You can't shoot straight with a pistol even under the best of circumstances. Damnably undependable weapon. But when you're sliding it around from target to target, the odds are fifty to one you can't hit anything at all. I've been shot at by experts. I wasn't guessing. I knew.

I jumped the idiot. Sure he fired. His bullet went into the wall six feet to the right of me. He never had a chance to pull a second shot. I beat the Hell out of him. I don't like being shot at. Not even when they miss me.

So now I had to get out of town. It didn't take much to convince Karen to come with me. Wives of pistol waving husbands usually do convince each other. Who knows, the next time he missed somebody he might just as likely hit her—purely by accident you understand. But that wouldn't be much use to her.

We grabbed our clothes and took off—but fast. Karen had a car. We used it.

About 70 miles southwest of Baghdad is the old city of Karbala. It's nothing particular. There's little of the elegance of Baghdad there. But it did possess one thing that made it fairly attractive at the time. It was the home of an old friend of mine, an Iraqi, now retired, with whom in days past I'd done a bit of adventuring. I shan't mention his name since at this point I have no intention of giving any government authorities a clue to his identity.

For old time's sake he welcomed us. And true to his code—and mine—he asked no questions. He put us up and took care of us for some days.

At the end of the week, however, he approached me. "My friend," he said, "we have done much business together, in the past. We have shed blood together and broken bread together. We have shared problems, dangers and rewards. But now as you know, I have retired. My sons are grown and strong. They are well married and have much honor and I would do nothing to harm them or their children, certainly nothing that would cause them to lose respect. Still, there is a profit to be made. You are a man who will not betray me. First, you too respect the lives we have shared and second, if you did, you would never leave this land alive. My sons and my cousins are many and they would be an extension of my right arm. This is kinship and this is honor. You agree?"

Naturally I agreed. What did I have to lose. I said as much.

He smiled. "To lose? Only your life which is not much, for all lives end sooner or later. And your woman which is less, since women are as many as the sands of the desert, even a woman such as yours. To gain? A great deal, since I offer you freely a third share in a treasure that is so vast that even the Caliphs of old would have slaughtered a nation to gain it.

IN THE YEARS before our independence, when the Turks were rulers here, a caravan of a great Pasha was once traveling from Baghdad to Damascus. For reasons of precaution, they did not take the river route to Syria, but instead they headed straight west across the desert.

"A sandstorm came. It was the will of Allah. The caravan perished. Then, thirty years ago, I found that caravan. There was a great treasure of gold and precious stones. I took some of the gold. I was still young and foolish and failed to realize that one stone can be worth a thousand pieces of gold. I meant to go back, but a certain incident, a blood feud intervened. The man I killed was a distant relative of the King. I had to flee the country.

"The things I did since then are known to you. But they are also known to others. Were I suddenly to appear with a vast treasure, certain words would be said and if I were not secretly killed and my house robbed, it would be very strange indeed. For others have heard of this treasure and covet it.

But suppose a friend, a trusted friend were to find that treasure. And suppose that instead of returning here he were to take it to Mosul and there seek out a man whose life by custom and blood belongs to me. And if that man were to sell that treasure quietly and slowly and deposit the proceeds in a most reliable bank. Of course that man would want a profit. And that is right. So a third would go to him. And the last third would be mine and it would be sufficient. I could draw on the bank and who could suspect, for in my lifetime I have done many things that gave me profit. So, you will do it? A third for you, a third for my friend and a third for me."

Things are expensive west of Baghdad. It cost us two hundred smackaroos to get hold of some over-size balloon tires for Karen's car. Lucky I've handled an oxyacetylene torch, because no one else in town was capable of cutting through her fender to make room for the new wheels. But at least we could now roll through the rough country. Folks thought we were a bit touched in the head, but I'd pulled deals like this before. Of it worked in Libya, it would work in Iraq.

We loaded up the backseat with food and plenty of water and took off westward. It was a ball. The car bounced and shook like hell, but the springs were good. It held. According to the story we let out we were heading for Damascus to get away from Karen's husband. That the Arabs understood. Woman stealing is an old and honorable profession in the desert country.

The first night camping out was perfection. We suddenly realized that this was really the first time we'd actually been alone, without a threat of interruption since we'd met. We made the most of it. I don't think we got more than two hours sleep between twilight and sunrise.

Finding the treasure would be easy. We had instructions so specific a baby could have done it. But we had to make certain we weren't being followed. That wasn't hard, either. The second night we broke camp an hour after darkness and drove through the night doubling back in a huge circle. It caused us to have wasted the entire second day's travel since we ended up back at our first night's campground. But it enabled us to be absolutely certain that no one was on our trail. Even the lightest footed desert hijacker leaves traces. There were none. We were satisfied.

It took us three full days to reach the point at which we were aiming. We didn't hurry. There was no need to. In fact the slower we went the better. Our target was a good hundred miles from the nearest oasis. If anyone had picked us up, unless they were well prepared in advance it was going to make it tough as hell on them. There are no water taps in that country and unless a man is well prepared, he doesn't dawdle around on a wild gamble.

The treasure itself was at the base of a stark, dead, outcrop of rock. We hit it dead on the nose, exactly as planned. Facing the prevailing wind as it did, a huge dune of sand had piled up against one face of it. Somewhere in that dune lay more than forty million dollars.

We were equipped for the job. I had brought a large tarpaulin with me. So we merely dug a small, ditch covering about an area of three or four cubic yards, worked in the tarp, hallooed it in the sand like a parachute, tying ropes from all corners to our front bumper. As we backed away the sand came too. Sure it was work, hard work, but it was easier than shoveling the whole mass.

We operated from twilight on, by our headlamps. It was cooler. Cut drive, cut and drive. Haul out a load and then go back and do it all over again.

I don't know how much sand we moved. I'm no engineer. But it was a lot. It took us two and a half nights to hit the main caravan.

But it was well worth it. The moment we struck paydirt we knew that the tarp had caught a couple of boxes. They had dried out practically to dust and split into a million fragments. Even in the headlights of the car we could see the flashing beams reflected from a thousand pieces of jewelry, red, green and brilliant white.

We stopped hauling then, naturally. We'd have to wait for daylight now. We certainly didn't want to chance losing our fortune in the shifting sands.

The next day was sheer heaven. At first sign of daylight we were down on our hands and knees, searching through the sand, sifting it, pouring it through our fingers as we tried to trace down the lovely jewels. They were lying all over

(The author of this article is a distinguished student of mental disorders who engages widely in private practice. He has adopted this pseudonym, and uses fictitious identities throughout the article, in order to protect the privacy of his patients whose cases are described herein.)

BY H. TREVELYAN ■ You meet her at a party. She is probably pretty and certainly well-groomed. She may be a trifle demure at first, but her fashionable dress displays her body a little more than is absolutely necessary. When her eyes meet yours there is a hint of invitation in them. The drinks are good, the party lively and sooner or later you get together.

She says, "It's so stuffy in here. Why don't we go somewhere less crowded?"

The way she says it tells you it is not the crowd or the smoke that bothers her. She really wants to be alone, so you go back to your place or hers. It makes little difference. When you get there you embrace, you kiss, and she is suddenly all over you, clinging, tearing at your clothes and her own. "Take me," she says. "I can't stand it. Take me now."

Like any normal male, you meet the challenge with your best efforts. When it is over, you congratulate yourself. This, you think, is it. What you have heard about and hoped for—a girl who can't say no.

If she really is, my friend, you are toying with dynamite.

In the sexual folklore of American males, the ultimate in good fortune is to meet a woman whose resistance is practically nil, whose appetite is insatiable, who is constantly and enthusiastically available. A woman who is, in short, a nymphomaniac.

Such a woman, so goes the myth, will inspire a man to heights of sexual activity beyond his wildest dreams by the sheer force of her own brimming passion. She will initiate him into mysteries of love-play seldom heard of and less often practiced. She lurks, in the words of Dr. Benjamin Morse, a "darkly erotic figure" in the minds of all youths and most men—a woman who offers bedroom athletics without limit, a minimum of tiresome preliminaries and no need for emotional entanglement.

Like all myths, this one contains a grain of truth. But the chances are overwhelmingly against

According to the popular myth, these girls are the ideal of every man's sexual fantasies. But the next time one tries to pick you up, better think twice about it, pal. 'Cause these unsatiable sweeties are sick — by the time you're finished you may be sorry!

TRAPPED BY THE CREEPING HORDE OF DEATH

by ARNE ENGSTROM

I WAS WALKING on my tip-toes, strolling gingerly up the rocky path towards the little Volvo coupe. There was still some more color film on the front seat. Suddenly, agonized screams shattered the stillness of the sun-drenched ford.

"Arnel Arnel THEY'RE ALL OVER ME!"

For a moment I paused—puzzled. "What's the matter honey?" I called, laughing. "Mosquito trouble?"

What the devil could she be yelling about? There weren't any people around this neck of the woods—we'd motored all the way down just to be alone.

Again a shrill howl echoed through the crisp air. The unearthly yell sounded like it was straight out of a nightmare. "They're everywhere!" she sobbed hysterically. "Please Please! HELP ME ARNE!"

I looked down the stony path. Through the spindly trees I could barely make out a flash of pink—Lise's bare body—fighting wildly against a surging tide of something—something yellowish-brown. Lise was a well-trained athlete—self-reliant. She wasn't the clinging-vine type given to panic.

She shrieked again and again—I knew she was in some horrible trouble. Above me the underbrush bristled faintly. Then I saw one of them. It skittered down the path and crawled toward me. A lemming! It eyed me for a fleet second, its thick fur matted with dirt and mold. Then, like a cobra, it shot at me, its mouth wide open!

Quickly, desperately, I reached above me for a

□ Pornography

By David O. Cauldwell, M.D. Pornography, like all ev., seems to be in the eye of the beholder. No doubt: someone will find evil in this book, probably because it is possible to present today, words and phrases as well as illustrations which would have been suppressed only a few years ago.

Dr. Cauldwell strips away all false notions and impressions regarding the subject and replaces them with facts and logic. Not a single word has been removed from the original printing which successfully withstood attacks by the Post Office ■ bar it from the mails.

Included in this publishing is a reprinting of an example of classical Japanese erotica—The Nightless City. This, too, is presented in completely unexpurgated form.

men—among them, cases of sperm count as low as 10,000,000—can achieve fertility under the proper circumstances.

■ GEORGE P—fell into this category. By the time his abnormally low sperm count was found to be responsible for his wife's inability to conceive, the P-s had already passed five childless married years. The doctor's first recommendations to George were regular doses of Vitamin E and B-complex pills, together with a high thyroid-extract diet, since both sperm agility and count are closely tied to general health. When this failed, George became one of 2000 men then testing the usefulness of a remarkable new drug, a synthetically produced male sex hormone called testosterone propionate.

Three times a week, the doctor injected George intramuscularly with 50 milligrams of the hormone, at a drug-store cost of $1.50. George felt absolutely no side effects. After six weeks of treatment, his sperm count had dropped, from an original testing of 15,000,000 to less than 5,000,000. By the end of the second month, tests revealed no living sperm cells at all.

Disaster? A medical catastrophe? Not at all. The principal involved is called the rebound phenomenon and, in George's case, worked like this: Treatment was stopped at the end of the second month and the P-s were advised to lead a normal life—(the drug has no effect on sexual appetite or ability). Once a month, George was to report to the doctor with a specimen. For three months, nothing happened. But on his fourth visit, George was alerted to learn that his count was 35,000,000! By the next month, it had skyrocketed to 180,000,000—and Clara was pregnant!

Although there is no positive proof ■ yet, doctors who have worked with the new hormone speculate that its effect ■ roughly the same as collapsing the lung of a TB patient. In both cases, total rest seems to give the malfunctioning organ ■ chance to completely recover. In the case of the male sperm count, recovery takes the form of overcompensation, as witness George P—'s fantastic count of 180,000,000!

Sometimes, neither drugs nor timing will have any effect on a man's sperm count, and surgery provides the only answer. This may be necessary in those cases where the delicate passages are blocked. Disease or malformation may be responsible for such a handicap, but in most cases, a simple operation restores the patient to full vitality. This, too, may apply to men whose sperm producing glands have never descended from the abdominal cavity. In this position, and until they have dropped, they will produce no functional sperm.

Lately, an international preoccupation with H-bombs and radioactivity has caused considerable speculation that X-rays and other forms of radioactivity will render the male population sterile. This is a striking example of a little information being a dangerous thing. While it is perfectly true that an overdose of X-ray or other radioactivity will cause sterility by destroying the tissue of the gland which produces male sperm, it would take far more of an exposure than most of us face in a lifetime. There are cases of X-ray-induced sterility on record, but they are rare.

Receiving far less attention, yet infinitely more likely to render a couple childless is the kind of sterility that, in a sense, is related to impotence—and may actually result in impotence. Doctors and psychologists are now in agreement that there is a definite link between a man's capacity to enjoy sex and his ability to father children, no matter how badly his conscious mind tells him he wants them. The case of Ward C— bears this out in almost classic detail.

■ WARD WAS A happy-go-lucky young fellow when he got married, content to live and let live, and genuinely in love with his wife Louise. In a little over a year, all that had changed. Louise, a highly nervous and insecure girl, made Ward change jobs, criticized the way he dressed, the things he said, and seemed to constantly berate him over one thing or another. And the thing she nagged him about most of all, was the fact that she hadn't become pregnant yet. Louise wanted a baby more than anything else in the world. Time and again she would remind Ward that there was nothing wrong with her—the doctor had assured her of that.

"It's you!" she'd snarl. "You're no good for anything!"

Well, it doesn't take Dorothy Dix to figure out that love can't survive long in a house like that, and, by the G—'s first anniversary, Ward had had it. But Louise clung to him—he was going to give her a baby if it was the last thing he did.

Except, of course, that he didn't. Although the couple tried regularly, although Louise charted her temperature to discover her peak fertility days, although Ward himself was examined by the doctor, neither pregnancy nor any physical reason for sterility showed itself. It was toward the last, just before Ward finally walked out on Louise altogether, that he found himself unable to participate with her at all. Now he was not only sterile, but impotent, as well.

Ward poured out the whole sordid story to the social worker he went ■ see about advice for a divorce. "She didn't care about me," he kept muttering. "All I was to her was a baby-making machine. When I failed at that, I wasn't any more use to her than last night's garbage."

Instead of referring Ward to a lawyer, the social worker sent him to the local chapter of the Planned Parenthood League, an organization that has done remarkably fine work in cases of sterility. Ward repeated his story to the doctor there.

"And how did you feel about it?" the doctor asked. "Did you get any gratification?"

Ward shrugged hopelessly. "I felt like a bull or a stud horse or something. What kind of gratification can a guy get that way? Where's the love?"

Obviously there wasn't any, either for Ward or his wife. So obsessed had she become with the idea of having a baby, so critical and cold had she been to her husband, that he was psychologically incapable of fulfilling his role as a husband and father! Lacking the necessary stimulation that love between husband and wife is supposed to provide, Ward's reactions were automatic, forced, and totally lacking in the proper physical results that might have led to pregnancy.

These medical facts were carefully explained to Louise. Then the social worker undertook to show her how a bit of wifely affection, a warmth and genuine love for her husband might have changed the whole picture. Honestly sorry, not wanting to lose her husband—when she really loved but, out of a peculiar mental block, hadn't been able to build up and strengthen—Louise agreed to her suggestions.

For a month, Ward and Louise didn't see each other. Then, early one evening they met for a quiet dinner in a restaurant. They chatted, went to a movie, held hands and came home to their apartment as though they'd never been away from it. That night, new worlds were opened to both of them. Forgetting their quarrels, forgetting the baby they both wanted so desperately, they discovered each other as individuals.

And nine months later, they had that baby!

HOUSE OF NAKED PAIN

first, let me tell you that I'm sorry this had to happen to you and we're going to try to find out who is responsible, but we can't do it without your help. Do you feel well enough to tell me about it this afternoon?"

"All right, Sergeant," The woman replied in a voice strong enough to encourage the detective's hope that he was finally going to get some real facts about her case.

"That's fine, Sonya. Now, look, I know it will be difficult for you to recall your ordeal, but honestly, Sonya, we need every scrap of detail you can remember. Anything could be important so I want you to try hard not to leave anything out. Understand?"

"Yes."

"Good, now I have a tape recorder in that case on the floor. I thought it would be less embarrassing than talking to several people. I'll set it up over here and we'll get started."

When it was ready to go the detective showed the woman how to speak into the hand mike and played it back as a test. She seemed to speak clearly and intelligently. The Sergeant explained that he would ask her to talk without interruption about whatever had happened.

Still trying to put the woman at ease, the detective suggested a smoke break before they started. He gave her a cigaret, lighted it for her, refilled her water glass and asked if she was comfortable. Then, for a fleeting moment, the detective thought he had blown the chance to get her statement.

A cloud of angry defiance moved across the woman's face, she ground out the cigaret, raised up painfully on one elbow and leveled an accusing finger at the detective. He stood motionless and puzzled at her bedside. Then a torrent of words gushed from the woman, hitting the Sergeant like a cold shower.

"Comfortable?" the woman almost shouted, "I appreciate you're trying to be a gentleman, but you're treating me like a 16-year old school-girl who'd been raped for the first time. Look, Sergeant, I'm a grown woman and I've been around a little but I got caught in a hell of a trick. I'm on your side, I want you to catch those damned animals too!"

"Here, pull back this sheet. It isn't going to be enough for you to hear my story—I want you to see what happened!"

As she ordered, the Sergeant pulled the sheet down to her ankles. She was naked and an involuntary 'God damn' slipped through the detective's lips as he stared at her body with the kind of shocked fascination that gathers people around accident victims.

"Now, Sergeant," the woman declared, "see those bandages on my breasts and legs? Well, those cover burns and bite marks and there's more on my stomach!

"There, take a look, Sergeant! They can't put a bandage where they burned and singed me there! And I can't even tell you how many times they raped me!"

The woman lowered her legs rolling clumsily and with obvious pain onto her side, then called to the detective:

"Now, take a look at those welts on my back and bottom and legs. That's where they whipped me, and there's burns back there, too. Pretty isn't it, Sergeant?"

The woman spit out the last words sarcastically, rolled over on her back again and lay spread-eagle before the almost speechless detective.

"Sonya," he started feebly, "it's a hell of a mess. All I can say is that I hope you get well soon and that I'll be able to get the bastards that did this to you!"

They sat and smoked in silence a few minutes. Then the detective made a few adjustments on the tape recorder and reminded her of the few preliminary questions he would ask. The woman nodded understanding and he began talking, handing over the mike to her for replies.

"What is your name?"

"Sonya Markley."

"Where do you live?"

"1627 Fulton Street, Apartment 5."

"How long have you lived there?"

"Almost four years."

That kind of routine questioning continued until all basic facts were on the record, then Sergeant Kindel spoke:

"Sonya, that takes care of the record questions. Now I want you to just tell me everything you can about what happened. I won't interrupt you but may have a few questions when you are finished."

IT REALLY began about a month ago when I met this guy in the 77 Bar on Fulton Street near my apartment and where I used to drop in for a drink sometimes after work. He said his name was Al, and I never did know his last name. I saw him there several times and he always bought me a drink or two. He asked me for a date a couple of times but I didn't go out with him.

I know I'm fat and Al probably heard around the bar that I lived alone in an apartment, so there would be only one reason he'd want a date and I didn't go for him like that.

(The detective whispered a question.)

Oh, Al is about 40 and tall and slim. He always wore good clothes and seemed to have money. He never told me where he worked, but maybe somebody around the 77

Bar would know more about him. I'm afraid that's all I know.

Anyway, one night he told me a friend of his was having a party where there would be a few drinks and some movies. Al asked me to go with him. I refused at first but he kept talking about it for several days and finally I told him I'd go. He told me his friend lived out in the country and that we'd meet some nice people.

I had met Al at the bar that night. We had a couple of drinks and started out in his car.

(Another signal from the detective.)

No, I don't know what kind of car it was. It was big maybe like a Buick or something and he drove fast. I didn't pay too much attention to where we were going because he kept talking all the time, but we drove for a long time.

I know we were on a dark country road and remember he turned into a narrow dirt road that was rough. I was a little scared then but he told me it was the private drive of his friend. We pulled into sort of a yard and there were several cars parked around. Al said the party was going to be in a barn they had fixed up and as we walked toward it, I mentioned that I didn't see any lights. Al said they were probably running some of the movies.

When we reached a small door of the barn Al knocked and a man opened it, motioning us into a small room. It was too dark to see very well as the man opened another door into a large room where a shaft of light from the projector cut through the darkness.

The place smelled like a barn and I remembered Al saying his friend had fixed it up. There was something strange about the place that I didn't like. Al led me to a bench near the back of the room, not too close to the others and where we could see the picture. I watched awhile and it was a filthy movie showing a naked young girl being raped by four men. It made me shudder and I wanted to leave right then.

I was looking over the heads that showed in the light from the projector and couldn't see any women. There must have been about twenty or more people there. I started to ask Al about it just as two big floodlights came on. I was blinded for a moment. Then I looked at the crowd of all men. I was scared and told Al that I wanted to leave.

There was some guy up in front standing on some sort of platform. He was talking but I wasn't paying much attention until all the men turned around and looked at me. They clapped and cheered but I still didn't know what it was all about.

about that. But at any rate, I managed to let him know I was available, if he wanted me. Before Christmas we were lovers. He was magnificent. He was so strong and practically insatiable. I think we went wild together. It wasn't long before my game was finished. I was deeply, madly, hopelessly in love with him.

"He seemed to read my mind. He was aware of my total devotion even before I was. Then one day, the entire thing changed. I came to his apartment. There were two other women there. He had sex relations with all of us, then insisted that the girls pair off and amuse him. He watched and laughed and kept giving us new and perverted ideas to perform. We all did as he told us.

"During the next week or so, he kept varying his demands. I was put through every form of sexual degeneracy known to humanity. Yet I knew that if I refused anything, he'd get rid of me. I was willing to bear anything, just to be with him. I was beaten; I was tortured; I was forced to have relations with other men. I became a participant in wild orgies, where men, women and even young children cavorted around, in a series of haphazard pairings that make me sick when I think of them.

"Then suddenly the big demand came. He had a job for me to do. Once it was finished, he promised, he'd set me up in a villa in Bavaria, and keep me as his mistress and lover for the rest of my life. Just this one small job. There was no one else who could do it. He said it wasn't so much for Germany as for him. Himmler was trying to overthrow him. If he failed, who knows what might happen. He shuddered. I didn't need anyone to draw me a picture. I knew what would happen if Himmler could convince Hitler that his usefulness was over. There was no room for failure in the Nazi high command.

"I agreed. He told me what had to be done. I became the mistress of a Prussian count who was involved in a plot against the Nazis. The count was horrible. He was fat, sloppy, and brutal. But I bore through it all. I allowed the count to make whatever use of me he wanted. And every week I managed to send reports of what the count was doing on to Canaris.

EVIDENTLY THE COUNT trusted me completely. He asked me to become a courier for his anti-party group. I told Canaris. He was delighted. I began to make regular trips to Switzerland. Each time, during the trip, the papers would be taken away from me for a few hours and photographed by Abwehr agents.

"On the last trip, the Abwehr man was delighted. One of the papers I carried was a list of 70 names, all those involved in the plot. Other papers too were highly incriminating. I was told that I would be arrested at the border and the papers confiscated. I was not to worry. Canaris takes care of his own, they told me.

"I was arrested, all right. But I never heard from Canaris again. Or anyone else in the Abwehr. I had no hearing, no trial. I was sent straight off to Buchenwald. Within 24 hours of my arrest I was in the concentration camp. I couldn't even tell my story. No one would listen.

"I suppose I was sentenced to death. I know I was in a death barracks. But by some mixup, I was spared hanging. I stayed in the camp till the war ended. I don't have to tell you what I went through. But I survived. I thank God for that."

The affair of Anna M is only too typical of his operations. No one around him was exempt from his demands. There are dozens upon dozens of similar stories. As a result, even the official records that implicate his aide, Col. Oster in treason against the Third Reich must be considered suspect. It's not impossible, not even improbable, that Oster was merely penetrating a subversive group at Canaris' own orders; that Oster was sacrificed just to attempt to protect Canaris himself.

Canaris always claimed that he wanted nothing to do with general policy of torture and murder that were a Nazi way of life. But within his own field, he seemed to have forgotten that. When it came to the "interrogation" of suspected enemy agents, he was like a fiend. The foulest SS torture chamber was like heaven in comparison to his "questioning room."

One spy who was located, Constantine K—, described it in detail. Mr. K—, a Greek in the employ of British M5 was caught observing German troop emplacements at a time when it was thought that the European invasion would come through the Balkans. K was rushed to Berlin and was personally questioned by Canaris.

"It began politely enough. Canaris tried to impress on me that I was lucky to be his prisoner rather than a slave to the SS. He said that the SS had wanted to execute me on the spot, but that the Abwehr had interceded for me. He said that while he realized that it was my duty to give out any vast amount of information, he hoped I would at least give him some small scrap of intelligence to justify his actions. It needn't be very much, he laughed, but just a trifle.

"I told him I was no traitor. He smiled and said he understood but suggested I think over his offer for a few days. I was returned to prison and was well treated. No one talked to me again for more than a week.

"The next time I was brought in for questioning, Canaris asked me if I was ready now to cooperate. I told him I had not changed my mind, that I was no traitor. He shrugged and again said he understood but that his earlier statements were still true. He would not mistreat me. He turned as if to leave the room. Then as he reached the door he hesitated a moment. "Perhaps you'd be interested in seeing something. It's only next door.

"I knew I had no choice in the matter. I was led to an adjoining room. I almost fainted at what I saw. My wife and four of my five children were there. They were nude, tied to rings attached to the ceiling, just dangling at the end of their stretched arms. Canaris laughed. He told me that while he wasn't going to torture me, he had made no promises about my family.

"I was tied to a chair. An Abwehr agent held my head so I couldn't turn it away. And while I watched, they started on my youngest son, a boy hardly more than five years old. There was no subtlety to it. It was brutal and direct. An Abwehr man grabbed the boy's leg and twisted it till I heard the bone snap. The child screamed with agony. The torturer kept twisting. There was a spurt of blood as the jagged ends of the bone tore through flesh and skin. I fainted.

"When I came to, perhaps five minutes had passed. The boy was now unconscious. The Abwehr man took out his dagger and sliced through flesh and muscle till the leg came off. Then picking it up, they brought it over to me, smeared my face with the blood and laid the leg in my lap.

"My wife was screaming. The other youngsters were whimpering. "Dadd, Daddy, help us. Don't let us die.

"What could I do? What would you have done. The world was a million miles away. My wife and children were right there in the room. I talked. I told them everything I knew. I sold out my friends, my associates, everything I believed in. Any question they asked me, I answered. It wasn't very much. They must have known that. I was too low in the organization to have any real information. Yet I suppose the very names of my associates made it worth while. If they could get as much knowledge from the others, sooner or later they'd get to the heart of our resistance network.

I WAS PUT into a cell in the cellar of the Abwehr building

I stayed there. I don't know how long. I didn't see my wife and children. They told me that they were in prison too but were still alive and that they were not being tortured.

"In 1945 The SS came and I was sent to a death camp. But the war ended shortly after. I found my wife and one child. They had survived. There was no trace of the others. After my treason, I couldn't face Greece again. We migrated to another country. Please don't say where we are today. Perhaps we can still find peace of mind.

As the war went on, with its succession of Allied victories, Canaris' position grew shakier. Hitler was looking for any excuses he could find and the seeming failure of the professional intelligence services were as good as any. To make matters worse, there was always Himmler standing over his shoulder.

Frankly, Himmler resented the Abwehr. Operating his own secret police, his own spy network, he wanted more than anything else, to completely control all sources of information in his own SS. He had been trying to take over for years. In addition, Hitler had never fully trusted the OKW (Ober Kommando Wehrmacht) Canaris, Nazi though he was, still belonged to the old military group. He was not a politician. He had been regular navy long before Hitler's party had been heard of.

Himmler's chance finally came. With defeat, absolute and total staring them in the face, the regular military leaders prepared to dump the Nazis as they had gotten rid of the Kaiser when he no longer served their purpose, and had destroyed the Weimar republic when it failed to develop Germany's military might.

It was a matter of cold logic and those were cold, logical men.

How many of them actually took part in the bomb plot cannot be said with certainty. Not too many. But the bulk of the regular high command were aware of what was going on. Canaris definitely knew. Not only were his own assistants involved, but letters addressed to him contained a vast amount of information relative to the plot. He had not reported it.

The arrest of Col. Oster marked the end of the Abwehr. Canaris was kicked out, given a token assignment and Himmler took over.

Within days it was finished. Himmler's men found enough in the Abwehr files to demolish Canaris' reputation. Papers, photostats and confessions of some of the plotters was presented to Hitler.

Canaris was arrested by the Gestapo. He was given a secret trial and was condemned to death. But for the time being, the record seemed to end right there. Gestapo files contain no information whatsoever as to the final disposition of the old Admiral. ■ was as if he disappeared into the void.

It was only after the war was over and a full investigation had been made that some witnesses were found who had seen the final chapter. Canaris had indeed been executed. He had been stripped of all rank and had been summarily hanged. Sworn testimony told of seeing the execution and of viewing the corpse after it had been finally cut down.

So Canaris is dead. There is no question that he deserved death. If Hitler hadn't killed him, he would unquestionably have taken his place in Nuremberg to have stood trial as a war criminal. Before the witnesses to his execution were found, ■ search had actually been made for him for that very purpose.

As an intelligent agent, as a master spy, he was one of the world's greatest. But as a man without principles, without mercy, with a heart of stone and the desires of a fiend, we are all better off without him. He's dead. All we can say now is, "Good Riddance!"

TREASURE OF BAGDAD

the place, big rubies, sapphires, emeralds and diamonds—diamonds as big as a fist, just lying there, rolling about, teasing us with their elusive brilliance.

How many we lost in the sand I don't know. Probably a fortune. Another million dollars worth might be lying around loose, today, waiting for someone to come upon them and pick them up.

But we didn't have time for a mere million. There was too much more, still boxed, still waiting to be collected.

We worked with shovels now, sifting the sand slowly, coming on the corpses of man and animal, and picking up our reward box by box, saddle bag by saddle bag, stone by stone as we found it.

Slowly but surely we filled our trunk. And there was still treasure left over to pour into the rear seats.

We couldn't take nearly all of it. The temptation was there, certainly, but with all that wealth, our lives counted now. Too much weight even on those oversize tires could bog us down. And with no one around to pull us free again, we'd stay where we were until we rotted.

Regretfully we shoveled enough sand over our treasure site to hide it from someone coming on it accidentally. We knew that the ever-present desert winds would pile back the sand to a smoothness in a matter thing Yankee

A job that I'd been promised died on the vine, and what with working permits and cartes d'identite and every other obstacle the French government could think of to prevent a foreigner from earning a living, I soon found my bankroll had nosedived down to zero. I was drifting from hand to mouth as a guide for snailed schoolgirls from the States.

I'd almost decided to move on to LeHavre and try to work my way back across the Atlantic on a tramp tub when, from out of the blue, an old uncle I'd hardly known existed, came through with a job.

My folks had migrated from Oslo to the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, a couple of years before I was born. Uncle Nels stayed behind in the old country. After the war, they helped carry him while he was getting back on his feet with a trucking business. I'd picked up some Norwegian as a kid—Uncle Nels was only too glad to give me a job to pay back my parents' kindness.

This might have made everything rosy. But I told him I wasn't taking any favors I didn't deserve. To learn the business from the ground up, I drove a truck for about a year. Then I moved into the front office, and there I met Lisa.

We worked side by side for about four months—that is, I worked when I could get Lise off my brain long enough to think about business. We hit it right off in an arrangement that was agreeable but didn't tie anybody down.

After a while, it hit me like a bolt of lightning. I was crazy in love with Lise! I was really looking forward to that summer weekend. I bought a small engagement ring. For days I practiced, hoping to delight her by proposing in flawless Norwegian—without a Brooklyn accent. I planned that after we'd married, I'd take her back to the States and start a small trucking business of my own.

For the perfect romantic setting, I decided on a spot on the Christiania Fjord. I wanted broad snow-capped mountains—I wanted glistening blue water. I wanted a soft breeze and bright golden sunshine.

I also got something I didn't want.

I never had heard much about the lemmings, Scandinavian rodents that from time to time go on crazy death marches to the sea. The theory is that the vicious little rats multiply so rapidly that they commit mass suicide to decrease their numbers. Usually they don't bother people in cities, but during a march they regard out-of-the-way country places as their exclusive territory. In a frenzy they chew up everything standing in their way—trees, and crops. Plus Lise and me . . .

THIRTY FEET FROM Lise, I tripped and fell into the middle of a slithering, razor-toothed carpet. A king-sized lemming, maybe twenty

Washington, D. C. 20016

The premature sex club eventually broke up, and the typical teenage round of dating and "going steady" began. Lucille continued to encourage the boys to pet and explore her. She was undisputed as the "hottest number" in the gang which attracted the older youths in the community. In the summer when she was thirteen, a sixteen year-old introduced her to actual intercourse.

"It was after a dance at the yacht club," she recalled. "We had been friendly all summer, talking at the beach and things like that. When he asked me to go to the dance, my parents were a little doubtful, but they knew his parents and so they said okay. After the dance we walked home, and on the beach we found this rowboat. He took me out onto the lake and we did it there on the water, under the stars. I felt all the thrills I had before, and I was only sorry when he had to stop."

The boy boasted of his conquest, and soon Lucille was enjoying and being enjoyed by most of the boys in the older group. Opportunities for sex were more limited in the city, but she was soon known to most of the boys as a "pushover," and was exceedingly popular.

"Of course it backfired," she said. "Some parents got wind of what was going on, and my folks packed me off to boarding school. I was mad but I didn't fight it." Sex became a summer pastime for Lucille, and one in which she engaged heavily. It was not until she was ready to enter college that she began to feel that the pleasure she experienced from sex was not enough. In talking with other girls, she became aware that she was not achieving orgasm and she redoubled her activity in hopes of finding a boy who could cause her to achieve climax and experience fulfillment.

"I don't know how many times I almost got there," she said. "I would just tighten up a little and then relax. It was nice, but I knew there was more. I always felt that I could just start right in again, but I wasn't often that the boy could." When she came to my office Lucille was still sure that she could find a man who could "keep going" long enough, she would achieve orgasm. But by the time she was discovered in the fraternity house, she never had. In frantic abandon, she had agreed to "take on" the whole chapter in hopes that where a single man could not satisfy her, a number could. By then her campus reputation was so well established that boys who solicited her favors were openly scornful of her morals. Shame and guilt added a what-the-hell feeling to her attitude. "I decided, 'why fight it?'" she said. "And I didn't."

Lucille's case illustrates several important points about nymphomania. One of these is that it is likely to become established as a pattern early in the sexual life, and is more common among girls who experience erotic sensations before most of their contemporaries. Their bodies are able to give them pleasure long before their emotions have developed sufficient maturity to embrace the full implications of the sex act.

Her contention that the "right man" could surely give her fulfillment was a false hope so long as she retained her infantile conception.

Doctor develops home treatment ■

Stop dandruff and check thinning hair

A leading New York physician, working with a team of hair and scalp specialists, has developed a simple, medicated home treatment plan, that may mean the difference between saving your hair or losing it to eventual baldness!

This important advance in hair and scalp care meets the very serious needs of so many people troubled by thinning hair, dandruff, itchy scalp, dull dry hair, and minor scalp irritations.

Loss of Hair Through Neglect

Many people lose hair, even become bald unnecessarily through neglect and mistreatment. Yet Nature gives you fair warning. Two such warnings are itching scalp and excess dandruff. These signs, as well as subsequent loss of hair, appear to be more common among men.

What most people fail to realize is that the scalp is skin and needs the same careful cleansing, nourishing and stimulation we give skin on the rest of our body, if you are a man or woman!

The healthy condition of the hair therefore, ■ mainly dependent on the condition of the scalp and proper stimulation of sebaceous glands and muscles.

FOR THE FIRST TIME A 4-WAY HOME TREATMENT

STEP 1. The treatment begins with the use of a specially designed Scalp Stimulator. With its hundred; of magic "fingers," it ■ scientifically designed ■ loosen dry, flaky dandruff and bring fresh revitalizing blood closer to the surface to stimulate and nourish hungry hair follicles. You'll delight in the tingling and exhilarating feeling of your scalp after each massage.

STEP 2. Is a unique Medicated Mint Shampoo. It contains a combination of natural and essential oils in a mild coconut oil base. This shampoo not only cleans away surface dirt, but more important, reaches down deep and loosens pore impurities embedded in the scalp. A shampoo once a week keeps hair and scalp thoroughly clean.

STEP 3. The third step in this treatment is an application of Balsam Peru Lotion. It is a hair conditioning emulsion of rich herbal extracts in a natural lanolin and vegetable oil base. Apply after shampoo to feed, lubricate and moisturize hair and scalp.

STEP 4. Is the application of an anti-dandruff sulphur ointment, a highly effective tissue healing salve that you massage into your scalp. Its antiseptic action goes to work immediately, positively checking itchy dandruff, healing minor scalp irritations and imparting new body and lustre to the hair.

Nothing Else Like It

So positive have been the benefits of this treatment, that it is easy to understand why scalp specialists feel these products are the most important hair and scalp treatment items ever developed.

Now Available to the Public for the First Time

This medically developed and tested treatment is called TOP-CHECK. It is now available to the public in limited quantities and at moderate cost. You can get the wonderful benefits of TOP-CHECK for less than 20¢ a treatment. An amazing bargain when you consider what it will do for your hair and scalp.

PASSION TRICKS

opening plunged a Filipino policeman. Lunging after him were eight wiry fellow cops. It was January 14, 1968, and Madam Paloma's house of China dolls on Mariveles Bay was rocking. As the cops came storming in, one voice was heard over the din:

"Everybody's under arrest!"
 "For que? We're just rehearsing!"
 "Well, you've rehearsed for the last time. Let's go!"

Beside a lewd porcelain statue, a tableau of four beautiful Chinese girls and a white man were acting out a scene from "Mar de Amor," the licentious play. The girl (center) was a willowy brunette with heavy-lidded dark eyes. Her kimono was askew. Seated around her were three other girls. A fragile beauty had one bare leg exposed and the other yet in her costume of barest briefs.

"Chief, some of 'em are getting out the back door!" shouted one of the men, gesturing frantically.

■ was the signal for the rest of the patrol to crash a heavy bamboo curtain between the back door and the cobbled streets of the Philippine capital. The cops swarmed after them swinging clubs as they went. A motley group of men and partially-dressed China dolls stumbled into the clutches ■ the law.

"But I've got to get back ■ my ship—" protested an American sailor.

"Tough luck!"
 "Your tough luck, you mean!" growled the swabber bringing up his knee. It was the signal for all holy hell to break loose. The girls screamed ■ Madam Paloma's house became a battlefield. Men grabbed chairs, statues, urns and shattered them over the heads of amazed police. The sailor in shorts seized a Buddha and knocked out the lieutenant as the latter's skull split open and blood spewed over the floor. The slow-to-act cops blew on their whistles and drew guns, finally, ready for action.

In ■ wild frenzy, Madam Paloma pulled the switches, throwing the whole place in darkness.

THE battle raged on. ■ stygian darkness Oriental girls—like as cats—tore into the upholders of the peace. They bit, scratched, kicked and punched. One of them leaped on the back of an officer. Straddling him ■ ■ he were a horse, she beat him with a bronze temple bell until ■ collapsed in a welter of blood. Madam Paloma tore an antique scimitar from the wall and slambod out blindly at the cops. In the confusion, somebody ■ ■ perfumed candle! A swarthy lumber dealer from the Luzon hills twirled a chairleg.

Three Chinese girls joined hands. Holding a carved jade pillar, they turned themselves into a whirlpool by running around the pole. Downing two cops, they knocked them senseless in the fury of their impetus. Then tore them to ribbons stamping, grinding their bodies with jeweled high heels. Two cops pulled them away by
